Weaving Music Threads: A Hispanic Celebration

Renaissance and Baroque traditions meet Afro-Latin and Indigenous rhythms

Boston, MA – The award-winning ensembles La Donna Musicale and Rumbarroco invite audiences to a luminous evening of music that bridges continents and centuries. Weaving Music Threads: A Hispanic Celebration blends Renaissance and Baroque masterpieces with Afro-Latin and indigenous influence, revealing the deep musical connections that shape the Americas today.

The program celebrates Nativity texts and festive villancicos from Spain, Portugal, and Latin America—music that unites devotion, rhythm, and joy. Listeners will hear the pulse of Africa, the melodies of Europe, and the voices of the Americas woven into a single tapestry of sound.

Led by Laury Gutierrez (viola da gamba), the concert features international artists: Adriana Ruiz (soprano), Daniela Tasic (mezzo-soprano), Fausto Miro (tenor), Danilo Bonina (violin), Katherine Shao (keyboards), Miguel Morales (percussion), and Grammy Award winner Eduardo Betancourt (harp).

“Our goal is to show how early music and today’s Latin sound are part of the same global living tradition,” says Gutiérrez. “It’s joyful, rhythmic, and deeply human.”

This uplifting celebration of cross-cultural heritage invites everyone, including early music lovers, students, and families, to experience Latin Baroque fusion without borders.

About the Ensemble:

Rumbarroco unites acclaimed musicians from diverse countries and backgrounds who share a passion for making a difference through music. The ensemble recreates and celebrates the rhythmic and harmonic interconnections that have shaped Ibero-American music from the Medieval period to today. Blending early European repertoire with Latin American folk and contemporary traditions, Rumbarroco creates a vibrant Latin-Baroque fusion that bridges past and present.
